

November 28, 2017, 11:52 AM

I urge you to quash any attempt at repealing net neutrality. The proposal to have companies exercise self-discipline in pricing is absurd on its face, and while they think they're arguing for capitalism, ending net neutrality is the least capitalistic thing they could do. It would mean the literal end of the free exchange of ideas. |